LETTERS

ON THE IMPROVEMENT OF

SHIP-BUILDING, &c.

OUR deſign in the publication of the LETTERS we have already printed, and propoſe in future to print, on this ſubject, being totally new in this country, has brought many people and opinions together, which latter muſt be conſequently of a various or mixed nature. The enquiries made at our PUBLISHER's have been ſuch as he (not being of the profeſſion) cannot be expected to anſwer; it will therefore be neceſſary to inform the PUBLIC of our plan, as well as of our reaſons for purſuing it in this manner, viz.

It is intended, in order to induce ingenious men to aſſiſt, by mathematical and philoſophical reſearches, the practical Builder,

1. To collect the opinions of the THEORIST, as well as of the PRACTICAL ARTIST, and place them in ſuch a point of view as may afford ground to proceed on in theſe enquiries.

2. To collect the information of Admirals, Captains, &c. of the Navy, who have ſeen theſe machines in actual ſervice, and conſequently are able to ſpeak on the reſpective merits and demerits much more ably than the Conſtructor.

3. To accumulate PLANS and MODELS, as well as ACTUAL EXPERIMENTS, from which reaſoning and concluſions may be drawn to render this abſtruſe ſubject more eaſy of inveſtigation.

4. We publiſh theſe LETTERS on the blue Cover of our MAGAZINE, as the moſt certain way of their being taken notice of without abridging our other Readers of their uſual quantity of amuſement, and as procuring to them a greater circulation than could be effected in any other manner.—We are conſcious that there does not at preſent exiſt any work which can be called a SCIENTIFIC TREATISE on the ſubject of SHIP-BUILDING in our language; but this method method of collecting ſingle Eſſays may as reaſonably be expected to bring forward materials wherewith to form one, as the HOUGHTON COLLECTION (publiſhed in a ſimilar manner in 1696) has produced many excellent Treatiſes on Agriculture, and conſequently the improvements now ſo viſible in England.

5. The PLANS and MODELS are likewiſe deſigned to form the materials of a PUBLIC LECTURE* on the ſubject, as one of the means in which the young may find improvement and the aged amuſement, and may be viewed as they are accumulated.

6. The ultimatum of our PLAN is, to form a SOCIETY, with able Maſters to inſtruct, and PREMIUMS or HONORARY REWARDS for NEW DISCOVERIES.

* Already in ſome forwardneſs.

NUMBER III.*

IN continuation of that diviſion of our plan which is to treat of the Form and Size of Ships, we muſt here take notice, that an experienced LIEUTENANT of the ROYAL NAVY, tho' he perfectly agrees with our Correſpondent, whoſe letter cloſed the laſt Number of our Original Papers in other reſpects, differs from him with regard to Ships of War of 50 guns: Theſe he wiſhes to retain in the ſervice, not as line-of-battle ſhips, tho' upon certain emergencies they might, and ought to be introduced into a fleet in that capacity, but as powerful ſingle ſhips, excellently well adapted to convoy fleets of merchantmen, in which ſervice ſhips of that rate diſtinguiſhed themſelves in the laſt war: As there are at preſent but few of them, in proportion to the other rates, it may be ſufficient to produce one inſtance.—The RENOWN, of 50 guns, a prime ſailor, the Commander of which more than once received the thanks of our merchants for his ſervices in protecting the commerce of his country home and outward-bound. Both of our Correſpondents therefore concurring in one point, that the number of Claſſes in the Navy might be reduced, it remains to be determined by Officers who have been long in the ſervice, and have experimentally found the advantages of employing 50 gun ſhips as convoys, and by impartial Maſters of trading veſſels, whether the propoſed alteration marked No. II. in our laſt, which makes five Rates or Claſſes, by retaining 50 gun ſhips, or that marked No. I. reducing them to four, according to our Correſpondent's letter, merits the preference; and any further information will be thankfully received, and communicated to the Public in ſome future paper.

Let

* For Numbers I. and II. ſee two Pages farther on.

Let us now, according to promiſe, inveſtigate the Conſtruction of Ships of 44 guns.

The contracting of ſhips on their upper decks is certainly a very erroneous practice, as by this mode of conſtruction, every wave, when ſuch a ſhip goes on a ſide-wind (which may be the caſe nine days out of ten) is conducted in a greater or leſſer degree upon the upper deck, thereby keeping the people continually wet. Nor is this the only conſequence: It is on this deck that all the material buſineſs is done, and therefore more room ſhould be given for working; and the ſhrouds leading to the dead eyes would in that caſe have a greater baſe than they have at preſent, and would be much ſtronger; neither could a ſhip be overſet with double the wind or ſea.

The ſmaller claſs of 70 gun ſhips, 64, 50, 44, are all of them built according to the preſent eſtabliſhment without contracted upper decks, cannot open their lower deck ports, even in moderate weather. They are all too ſmall, and have not ſufficient bearings; ſo that from theſe cauſes, and the ports upon their lower decks, though large, being only 4 feet 6 inches above the ſurface of the water, it is very unſafe at any time, and abſolutely impoſſible to open them at all in a moderate breeze; and thus they are by no means a match for a French ſhip of 36 guns in an engagement. wet it is eaſily practicable to have them 6 feet out of the water, then they might be opened againſt the enemy with the greateſt ſafety a moſt times.

The CONQUEROR and the CORNWALL, old 74 gun ſhips, had ſufficient bearings, and conſequently were better ſea-boats, and could open their lower deck ports almoſt in any weather.

Another cauſe of diſaſters to men of war is, the wrong conſtruction of a Pipe which it has been judged neceſſary to introduce into them, in order to throw in a proper quantity of water, to mix with the bilge water, and which is pumped out again, to cleanſe the ſhip, and free her from foul and noxious air. This Pipe, at preſent, is ſo badly contrived, that the working of the ſhip ſoon breaks it, and it is well known that the ROYAL GEORGE was obliged to have a new one after every cruize, which at laſt proved the cauſe of her dreadful cataſtrophe. By the aſſiſtance of ſkilful workmen, we hope to be enabled hereafter to preſent a new form of a pipe, to prevent the danger ſhips are expoſed to from the breaking of theſe machines on the preſent conſtruction; and not being as yet in poſſeſſion of one which in every reſpect meets with the approbation of the gentlemen concerned in our patriotic inſtitution, we muſt ſtill ſolicit the favour of communications upon the ſubject from ingenious men.

An improvement in the Operation of the RUDDER has been ſuggeſted, ſketches of which, with proper explanations, are preparing for our next Number. In the mean time, we wiſh to ſhew an ardent deſire to oblige all our Correſpondents, by as early an inſertion of their letters as the nature of our extenſive plan will admit, due regard being paid to the arrangement of them, as they coincide with that diviſion of our ſubject we may have under immediate conſideration.
